

Season's Greetings!

Welcome to the last TechSmith newsletter of the year. It hardly seems like that can be true, but 2016 is right around the corner.

I hope your holiday season is off to a great start. This time of year, I look forward to getting cards and letters filled with updates on what my family and friends have been up to this year (and, if I'm lucky, chocolate). But how cool would it be to receive a video instead? If you're looking for something a little different to send your loved ones this year, why not record a video holiday card? You could even make a quick and festive thank you video for that ugly sweater party you attended. Video lets you add a personal touch to your greetings, and, as a bonus, they don't even require a stamp!

Happy recording, and I'll see you next year.

SuperStamps Holiday – 160 Stamps You Can Use in Snagit

Inspired by the festive season, SoftwareCasa put together a stamp collection including more than 160 Christmas and Winter Holiday stamps ready for use in Snagit. The stamps are in transparent .PNG format, so you can easily place them on any background. There are also pre-made greeting cards included in .JPG format for quick use. Get creative this holiday season with SuperStamps, available only through our partner SoftwareCasa.

TechSmith Fuse: New iOS Update

A new TechSmith Fuse (iOS) update is now available! With our latest version, you can quickly mark up screenshots and photos in Fuse; then email, tweet, or text your image directly from the Fuse iOS app. How handy is that? Now, when you see something important that could use a little marking up for clarification, you can do it right from your phone instead of waiting to get back to your computer. Quickly text it to your coworker/friend/mom, and ta-da you're sharing marked up images in real time!
